

peacebuilders camp at Koinonia Farm

Just the Facts

The mission of Peacebuilders Camp at Koinonia Farm is to provide a transformative learning experience that empowers a diverse community of youth to work toward peace, justice and human rights.

Located in rural Americus, Georgia, campers' home for the week is Koinonia Farm, an intentional farming community founded in 1942 with a rich history of work for peace and justice.

A typical day at camp includes some combination of games, discussion time, sports, crafts, service learning, field trips, free time, storytelling, workshops, and s'mores around the campfire.

The curriculum at Peacebuilders Camp is based around the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. Each day we focus on a different right with discussions, field trips, and activities. Throughout the week we incorporate stories of diverse peacemakers working to make those rights a reality and challenge campers to consider how their own gifts and interests might fit into the struggle for human rights for all people.

Camp Dates

July 2-7, 2018 (ages 11-12)

July 9-14, 2018 (ages 13-14)

July 16-21, 2018 (ages 13-15)

Campers

We accept 20 campers per session. Campers come from both urban and rural areas, from the local town of Americus and from faraway places, from English-speaking and non-English-speaking homes, from various faith traditions, from U.S.-born, immigrant, and refugee families, and from households with incomes both high and low. Campers with special needs are encouraged to contact us, as we are eager to make accommodations to make camp as welcoming as possible.

Special Session Three

Young people, ages 13-15, who are particularly passionate about peacemaking, human rights, or social justice activism and are excited about working with their peers to design, carry out, and evaluate a peacemaking project are invited to apply for Session Three and become part of our team which will travel to PeaceJam in the spring of 2019.

Teen Leadership

We offer a teen leadership program for passionate and responsible 17-year-olds to serve as counselors-in-training at camp. Application information is on our website.

Koinonia Farm is a 501(c)3 non-profit. We invite you to donate to help make camp possible for everyone!
